主旨: RE: November Taipei Keynote Speaker – (NS)

Hi, dear Joanna:

I think International Congress on Engineering and Information (<https://iceai.org/>) seems more appropriate for me. But Global Conference on Engineering and Applied Science (<https://gceas-conf.org/>) also is OK. The title of my keynote speech, abstract, and short bio are in the following.

Title: As AI is competing for programmers' jobs, what shall we programmers do? From a software testing researcher's perspective.

Abstract:

KOL are warning that programmers' job opportunities will be eliminated by AI. More and more development teams prompt AI for program templates. In this trend, although less and less programmers will be needed, job opportunities for requirement engineers and program QA engineers will become stronger than ever. In this speech, we discuss how software test teams may adapt to and benefit from the huge opportunity of AI technology. Finally, we present a new product concept and a business model for software testing service in the AI era.

Bio:

Professor Farn Wang obtained his Ph.D. degree from the Computer Sciences Department, University of Texas at Austin, USA. He obtained a BS. degree from National Taiwan University, Taiwan and a MS. degree from National Chiao-Tung University, Taiwan. He is interested at model-checking and software testing technology. He was the Steering Committee chair of International Symposium on Automated Technology for Verification and Analysis (ATVA) from 2003 to 2022 and an Advisory Committee member of ATVA from 2022. He was also an Associate Editor of the journal of Formal Method in System Design (FMSD), Springer from 2013 to 2021.

Dear Professor Wang Farn,

I hope this email finds you well.

Could you please let us know when we can expect to receive your professional biography and photo?

If your abstract is not yet ready, kindly inform us, as we are still in the call for papers stage.

Having your information available on the website would be extremely helpful.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Should you have any questions, please feel free to let me know.

Thank you

Sincerely,

Joanna

Hi, dear Joanna and Robert:

Thanks for your effort in making this wonderful event.

Today my wife is around.

Will that be ok if she also join the lunch?

If that is ok, how much do I have to pay for her lunch at hkiceas today?
